MAYFIELD & GRAVES COUNTY HISTORY

In the early 1800s President Andrew Jackson authorized the negotiation of a land purchase from the Chickasaw Indians, and here his name is used daily - Mayfield being located in the middle of the "Jackson Purchase". This fertile land attracted early settlers from Virginia, North and South Carolina and Tennessee who brought with them a degree of education and culture and a fierce determination to succeed on the land. Remarkable in their achievements as craftsmen and farmers, they put down roots to blend a political, economic and social environment unique, perhaps only to Mayfield and Graves County.

A trip from Paducah and Interstate 24 takes travelers down beautiful four-lane Highway 45 lined with a mixture of commerce and industry and lush farmland into Mayfield and is a fitting introduction to Graves County. Downtown Mayfield features a historic district with antique-era light fixtures and renovated sidewalks with brick inserts. Mayfield is an all-American town where "Glory Days" is still celebrated on the main thoroughfare on the Fourth of July. In Mayfield, you'll find the kind of Western Kentucky charm indicative of the entire region.

If you've ever been to Mayfield, raise your hand. Just in case you haven't, it is one of those unexpected delightful surprises. It's a place that almost makes you say to whoever is listening, "Why haven't I been here before?"

Visitors can stop off at the Edana Locus Mansion, which serves as the local tourism and chamber office. And then there is a most unusual sight, one you will probably not see anywhere else. Wooldridge Monuments in Maplewood Cemetery is referred to as "The Strange Processions that Never Move." It consists of 18 life-sized statues grouped around the tomb of Henry G. Wooldridge, a local horse trader who moved to Mayfield in 1840.

Perhaps the most notable Graves County event is the annual Fancy Farm Picnic, held the first Saturday of each August. The locals like to say, "If a Kentucky politician doesn't speak at the Fancy Farm Picnic, he doesn't have a prayer come election time." The annual gathering began in 1834, was suspended during the Civil War, and resumed in 1880.

Camp Beauregard is a must do—they say it is full of rich history, active spirits and a gorgeous view. I must go by and pick up a broom at Henson's. So much to do here—who knew?

Camp Beauregard

Water Valley
Established in Water Valley in 1861 it's purpose was to protect the eastern flank of Columbus, KY. It also served as a recruiting and training center. At its peak it housed 6000 men. No actual battles were fought here but several scouting parties engaged in skirmishes. Epidemics of typhoid, TB and pneumonia took the toll of men stationed here. Over 2000 confederate soldiers buried here.

Confederate Monuments

Courthouse Square

The 1917 monument is significant to Graves County. A strongly Confederate community, Mayfield was occupied by a small Union force in 1864 & the citizens were forced to build an earthen fortification around the Courthouse. Only one of four Civil War fountains in KY
